Introduction

1. The Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review, established in accordance with Human Rights Council resolution 5/1, held its twenty-fifth session from 2 to 13 May 2016. The review of Hungary was held at the 6th meeting on 4 May 2016. The delegation of Hungary was headed by the Minister of Justice, Mr. László Trócsányi. At its 13th meeting held on 10 May 2016, the Working Group adopted the report on Hungary.
2. On 12 January 2016, the Human Rights Council selected the following group of rapporteurs (troika) to facilitate the review of Hungary: Nigeria, Panama and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland.
3. In accordance with paragraph 15 of the annex to Human Rights Council resolution 5/1 and paragraph 5 of the annex to Council resolution 16/21, the following documents were issued for the review of Hungary:
 - (a) A national report submitted/written presentation made in accordance with paragraph 15 (a) (A/HRC/WG.6/25/HUN/1);
 - (b) A compilation prepared by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) in accordance with paragraph 15 (b) (A/HRC/WG.6/25/HUN/2);
 - (c) A summary prepared by OHCHR in accordance with paragraph 15 (c) (A/HRC/WG.6/25/HUN/3).
4. A list of questions prepared in advance by Afghanistan, Belgium, the Czech Republic, Germany, Liechtenstein, Mexico, the Netherlands, Norway, Slovenia, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland was transmitted to Hungary through the troika. These questions are available on the extranet of the UPR.

I. Summary of the proceedings of the review process

A. Presentation by the State under review

5. The Minister of Justice stated that Hungary attached particular importance to the UPR mechanism and was committed to protect and fulfil all its human rights international obligations.
6. The delegation recalled that in conformity with its open invitation Hungary had received six visits of special procedures since its first review, responded to all of their letters had submitted reports on time to three Treaty Bodies, was making every effort to submit its overdue reports, and presented, in May 2014, a mid-term UPR report on the implementation of the recommendations received in 2011.
7. Hungary had also acceded to OPCAT in 2012 and, since January 2015, the Commissioner for Fundamental Rights shall proceed as National Preventive Mechanism called for in the Optional Protocol. Hungary had acceded to or is in the process of ratification of several European human rights instruments and the Government had continued to incorporate its international obligations in its national legislation.
8. The new Fundamental Law came into force in January 2012 which enshrined that human rights are inalienable, interdependent and indivisible. Hungary remained a parliamentary democratic republic. Several cardinal laws, requiring a qualified majority, had been adopted relating to major human rights issues such as the Commissioner for Fundamental Rights, freedom of information, the Constitutional Court, the legal status and remuneration of judges, the prosecution service, freedom of conscience and religion as well as the legal status of churches.

9. The national human rights institution had been strengthened and unified and it received, in December 2014, the status A from the International Coordinating Committee of National Institutions for the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights. Furthermore, the national architecture for the protection of fundamental rights had been perfected with the establishment of the National Authority for Data Protection and Freedom of Information and by the Equal Treatment Authority.

10. One of the outcomes of Hungary's first review was the establishment, in 2012, of an inter-ministerial human rights working group which has an advisory nature. The Human Rights Working Group set up, from the beginning, a round table to facilitate consultations with civil society organizations. For instance, the draft national report prepared by the Government for its second UPR was circulated among the members of the round table for observations, which were, subsequently incorporated into the final version of the report. As a signature engagement the Government of Hungary has organized since 2008 the Budapest Human Rights Forum with the aim to diffuse knowledge and raise awareness about human rights.

11. The Government had embarked in a comprehensive reform of the penal system to conform it to international law. In this context, a new criminal code entered into force in July 2013 based on four principles: efficiency, consistency, simplicity and modernity, supplemented with severity in the case of repeat offenders, and a preventative approach for first offenders.

12. The legislation on penal execution had also been reviewed to, inter alia, integrate several recommendations from the European Committee for the Prevention of Torture. And, following the ruling László Magyar vs Hungary made by the European Court of Human Rights, the Government had authorised the possibility of revision of life imprisonment sentences.

13. The delegation noted that the Ministry of Justice was in the process of amending the Law on Criminal Procedures to incorporate, among other provisions, the protection of the procedural rights of vulnerable groups as well as the effective regulation of covert operations and secret surveillance.

14. With regard to equality and non-discrimination, the delegation stated the new Fundamental Law contained a comprehensive definition of discrimination. And, following CEDAW's concluding observations, the new Penal Code introduced a legal provision criminalizing domestic violence, including psychological violence.

15. The Government had established a policy of zero tolerance against xenophobia and racism. Anti-Semitic and Anti-Roma statements had been officially denounced by the Government and had triggered legislative revisions. For instance, the rules of procedure of the Parliament concerning hate speech had been hardened and the Chair of the Sitting has a wider disciplinary authority, being able to request the exclusion of a politician from a session and impose fines if the MP used expressions against national, ethnic or religious groups or individuals. Moreover an advisory group composed of hate crimes specialists had been established in 2012.

16. The denial of the Holocaust (Jewish and Roma) had also been criminalized in the Penal Code with penalties up to three years of imprisonment.

17. The Minister of Justice acknowledged that, since 2015, Hungary was facing, with other European countries, a migration crisis without precedent. Hungary had done its best to find a balance between the respect of humanitarian law and the protection of the national public order, a very complex task. It was in this context that the Government had approved several measures to strengthen the protection of borders, and improve the system of asylum, in compliance with international standards.

18. In concluding, the delegation noted that several changes had been introduced in the criminal code to consolidate the protection against smuggling in human beings. The most recent amendments were aimed at curbing the activities of cross-border organizations associated with the migration crisis.

B. Interactive dialogue and responses by the State under review

19. During the interactive dialogue, 86 delegations made statements. Recommendations made during the dialogue are to be found in section II of the present report.

20. Lebanon welcomed the adoption of a new Constitution and commended the interest showed by Hungary in protecting rights of ethnic communities.

21. Sweden stated that since 2010 the ruling party has made major changes that have gradually removed checks on the executive branch.

22. Switzerland was concerned at the measures taken by Hungary limiting access to the asylum procedure.

23. Tajikistan noted the adoption of a number of laws as a basis of a national strategy for the protection and upholding of human rights.

24. Thailand noted the widespread privatization of health services and urged the Government to ensure its policy does not affect access to quality healthcare.

25. The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia welcomed the ratification of OPCAT and encouraged authorities to continue efforts to tackle disbanded organizations targeting Roma.

26. Timor-Leste welcomed the establishment of an inter-ministerial Human Rights Working Group responsible for monitoring human rights.

27. Togo appreciated Hungary's full cooperation with Special Procedures mandate holders and welcomed the establishment of a national preventive mechanism.

28. Turkey remained concerned about living and detention conditions of refugees, asylum seekers and migrants and underlined the importance of fighting against human trafficking.

29. Ukraine commended the adoption of the new Constitution and human rights strategies including on social equality of men and women.

30. The United Arab Emirates welcomed measures to protect minorities from hate crimes and to combat incitement to religious hatred.

31. The United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland encouraged Hungary to ensure that implementation of new measures contribute to greater transparency.

32. The United States of America was deeply concerned that the Hungarian Government had taken steps that eroded checks and balances and centralized executive power.

33. Uruguay welcomed the adoption of the new Constitution in 2012, and steps taken on integrating minorities, although challenges persisted.

34. Albania commended Hungary on the adoption of a specific legal provision in line with the Concluding Observations of the CEDAW governing domestic violence.

35. The Philippines expressed concern about reported violation of human rights of migrants and called for international assistance to Hungary.
36. Argentina noted actions taken to end domestic violence and encouraged Hungary to continue adopting measures for this purpose.
37. Australia welcomed the establishment of the commissioner for Fundamental rights and encouraged Hungary to continue supporting it.
38. Austria expressed concern about allegations of undue government interference with political media coverage and lack of an effective strategy to counter the increase recourse to hate speech in Hungary.
39. Azerbaijan welcomed Hungary's accession to OP-CAT and appreciated the work done by Hungary in implementing social protection programmes for victims of trafficking.
40. Bahrain commended Hungary's intention to criminalize domestic violence but was concerned that there was no similar condemnation of other forms of violence.
41. Bangladesh expressed concern that the current level of ODA remains low in Hungary despite the efforts to increase ODA contribution.
42. Belarus was satisfied by the adoption of a national strategy on human trafficking and the implementation of youth-oriented preventive programmes.
43. Belgium commended Hungary for the measures taken to fight discrimination against women and noted that several reports mention that patriarchal attitudes and stereotypes persist in Hungarian society.
44. Bosnia and Herzegovina welcomed the OP-CAT ratification and expressed concern over constant low representation of women in decision-making processes.
45. On the independence of the constitutional court and the judiciary, the delegation of Hungary stated that new laws were enacted which were reviewed with the representatives of the European Commission. It stated the Constitutional Court had very similar rights to the rights of the German Constitutional Court and that since 2012 in more than 100 cases the Constitutional Court had declared some examined laws unconstitutional and overruled some judicial decisions. This proved that the Constitutional Court was a real genuine controller of the legislative branch and the executive branch in Hungary. The delegation underscored the independence of the Constitutional Court.
46. Regarding the administration of the judiciary a new system was created in which the National Office for the Judiciary and the National Council of Justice are jointly overseeing and supervising the judicial branch that demonstrated the absolute independence of the judicial branch.
47. The delegation highlighted that access to public data was rarely rejected -only if there was a national security issue, otherwise data had to be provided. It stressed that from the point of view of checks and balances concerning the independence of the judiciary and access to public data, Hungary was very transparent.
48. The delegation underscored that in the context of migration there was a joint responsibility of the international community, so a solution should be found where all the parties were partners. According to the Fundamental Law of Hungary, the right of asylum was provided to all asylum seekers. Hungary was the only country that registered over 200,000 people at its borders. The Hungarian public administration system was willing to handle these asylum applications. However, the majority of the asylum seekers actually left the country shortly after applying for asylum.. Hungary did not close the border per se, but in order to protect the external borders of the Schengen Zone it established transit zones and in the transit zones there was the opportunity for anyone who wished, to claim for asylum and enter the Hungarian territory following a positive decision on this claim.

49. The delegation reported that vulnerable groups were always allowed entry. It pointed out that in the transit zones the Hungarian Red Cross and NGOs were also present, having received financial support from the Hungarian government in order to make sure that these refugees would be taken care of. In the transit zones accommodation, medical care and catering were provided. Hungary operated open reception centers. The delegation underscored that for the implementation of asylum detention, there were detention centers, not prisons, and that detention was only applied as a last resort (1.35% of asylum seekers were actually in detention centers in 2015). The delegation mentioned there was room for improvement. It explained that old international legal frameworks were often not easy to comply with; therefore Hungary was a very active party of various debates concerning the future legal framework and regulation on migrants.

50. Botswana noted measures to combat domestic violence and expressed concern about reports of continued discrimination of women belonging to national minorities.

51. Brazil was concerned with reports on denial of asylum applications after the adoption of a new law stipulating a list of safe countries.

52. Bulgaria appreciated the establishment of the office of the Ombudsman and the setup of an inter-ministerial Human Rights Working Group.

53. Canada remained concerned by reports of intimidation and reprisals against human rights defenders.

54. Chad welcomed the adoption of a new Constitution and the establishment of a Working Group on Human Rights.

55. Chile appreciated the efforts made by Hungary in fighting discrimination against Roma and highlighted the National Strategy to promote gender equality.

56. China noted the measures taken by Hungary in protecting minorities and promoting social inclusion.

57. Colombia noted the measures adopted by Hungary to prevent and combat human trafficking and discrimination against women.

58. Croatia commended campaign for children, parents and teachers to promote responsible internet use for children aiming to tackle protection of personal data and prevention of cyber bullying.

59. Cuba welcomed measures towards equality in rights of persons with disabilities and noted problems on racism, intolerance and hate speech in all the political spectrum.

60. The Czech Republic thanked the informative presentation by Hungary.

61. Ecuador was concerned about gender discrimination and mistreatment by security agents against Roma, national minorities and non-citizens, including children.

62. Egypt welcomed inter alia, strengthened guarantees of judicial independence and support for further independence and effectiveness of the National Human Rights Institution.

63. Ethiopia commended the annual Budapest Human Rights Forum and the commitment of the Government in establishing an Inter-ministerial Working Group.

64. Finland was concerned that Hungary is constructing a system in which the majority of refugees will be denied access to the territory of the EU.

65. France welcomed the Hungarian delegation and made recommendations.

66. Georgia commended Hungary for ratifying OP-CAT and for the establishment of a national preventive mechanism.
67. While seeing persisting shortcomings in Hungary, Germany welcomed the ratification of OP-CAT and of the Firearms Protocol.
68. Ghana noted the adoption of a new Constitution providing a comprehensive legislative framework, which demonstrates Hungary's commitment to implement its international obligations.
69. Greece welcomed the progress made by Hungary in the field of human rights since its first review, particularly the ratification of OP-CAT.
70. Guatemala acknowledged the progress made by Hungary in strengthening human rights through national strategies in a number of areas.
71. The Holy See welcomed measures taken to prevent and combat trafficking in persons and commended the endeavours to enhance the social security of families.
72. Honduras welcomed the endorsement of the National Strategy against human trafficking 2013-2016, the law on detention of victims of trafficking and the ratification of OP-CAT.
73. Iceland deeply regretted recent amendments to the Hungarian Criminal Code that make it an offence to enter the country through the border fence. It was also concerned at the persistence of xenophobic attitudes and hate crimes towards Roma.
74. On hate speech Hungary asserted that up until 1989 it had a communist dictatorship where people had no chance to express themselves freely, and at the time of the change of regime a decision was made to have a very wide definition of the freedom of expression. It was almost an absolute right, so there was only a very limited area of limitation. Various legal acts had dealt with this issue, but the Constitutional Court exercised its criticism in connection with the limitation of the freedom of expression. Nevertheless, in 2011 when the new Fundamental Law was adopted, a very important principle was included, which was the principle of the dignity of communities. Consequently, when freedom of expression is exercised it can never harm the dignity of any community, giving the chance to fight against hate speech.
75. The new Civil Code of 2014 entitles any member of a community to enforce his personality rights in the event of a false and malicious statement made in public at large for being part of the Hungarian nation or of a national, ethnic, racial or religious group. The application of the Criminal Code is the ultima ratio, but Racism-motivated hate speech needed to be combatted. The delegation noted that after the adoption of the new Fundamental Law, an act regarding para-military organizations was also adopted, criminalizing anyone who organized other people against a particular community. The delegation considered that civil society could also operate as a sort of alarm system, with the support from the Hungarian government to do so.
76. On the migration issue, the delegation explained that - while taking into account the Geneva Convention - according to the Schengen agreement, any irregular migrant could be sanctioned. In this regard the issue of safe third countries should be taken into account, and Hungary considered Serbia as a safe country because the lives of individuals were not at risk there. The delegation expressed it was very difficult to control people coming through green border and that is why transit zones were established where people can enter our territories in a regular way. All the applications and procedures are launched in connection with those who enter Hungarian territories through the transit zones, while medical help and legal assistance is provided.

77. The delegation indicated that efforts against human smugglers were of major importance and therefore criminalization in connection with human smuggling, referring to stories about people dying in trucks. It expressed its intention to cooperate with the UNHCR and to address the situation of children and unaccompanied minors.

78. The delegation of Hungary asserted that religious diversity and religious tolerance had a long tradition in Hungary. There was no prejudice against Islam in Hungary and it had no historical context. In Hungary there are over a thousand Muslim university students with a state grant who enjoy absolute protection and experience the tolerant side of the Hungarian society on a daily basis. The delegation expressed that the third largest Jewish Community of the EU lived in Hungary.

79. Hungary was also very diverse regarding ethnic and national minorities, 13 of which registered, i.e. which had the right of self-governance. In 2011 during its EU presidency Hungary initiated the European Roma Strategy which continued through the Hungarian National Social Inclusion Strategy, which aimed to ensure that in the areas of education, housing, healthcare and other areas the Roma minority is supported in order to be a fully integrated group of Hungarian society. Hungary was dedicated against segregation, the delegation pointed out that in 2014 a medium-term strategy was established to combat segregation and integrate Roma in the mainstream society, including the prevention of early school-leaving and fighting early drop-out.

80. The Government considered family policy, women's policy and the protection of children as one integral issue. Women were enabled to reintegrate in the labor force after giving birth. Although there were no female ministers in the Hungarian Government, there were several female State Secretaries and many women working in senior positions in the governmental and non-governmental sectors.

81. Full protection to the rights of children was provided and the Ombudsman had a very unique set of tools. The institution of the representative on children's rights was created and this office could be contacted directly by children, having the right to intervene in educational institutions and the educational system.

82. Regarding violence against women the delegation recalled the new crisis centers to support victims and considered it a very important task to ratify the Istanbul Convention.

83. India noted with concern that the amendment to the Law on Freedom of Information has undermined the right to information in Hungary.

84. Indonesia appreciated the adoption of a new Constitution on fundamental human rights and the establishment of the Inter-Ministerial Human Rights Working Group.

85. The Islamic Republic of Iran thanked Hungary for the statement delivered on the human rights achievements since the first UPR cycle.

86. Iraq called upon Hungary to continue efforts undertaken to develop care programmes targeting children and elderly and to continue combating racism and hate crimes.

87. Ireland noted with concern the introduction of increasingly restrictive regulations on accreditation and funding of civil society organisations. It was concerned about reports of threats and harassment of human rights defenders in Hungary.

88. Italy welcomed the creation of the Subcommittee on Women's Dignity as an important step in combating violence against women in Hungary.

89. Japan was concerned by reports that media had been subjected to restrictions and political interference under the new Media Act and welcomed revisions to said Act.

90. Kazakhstan welcomed the comprehensive criminal law reform, the ratification of the OP-CAT and the strengthening of the Ombudsperson system.
91. The Lao Peoples' Democratic Republic welcomed efforts to implement the recommendations accepted during the last UPR cycle and commended Hungary for the adoption of the new Constitution.
92. Latvia was alarmed by some of the preliminary observations of the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights defenders in Hungary.
93. The State of Palestine welcomed a number of positive results achieved by Hungary in ensuring the rights and equal opportunities for persons with disabilities.
94. Libya noted with deep satisfaction the progress achieved by Hungary since the first UPR cycle.
95. Lithuania commended steps towards combating hate crimes by adopting new legislation that criminalizes violation of dignity of any national, ethnic, racial or religious community.
96. Malaysia noted advances in human rights protection and stated that additional focus could be given in areas such as gender equality, combating racial discrimination and rights of migrants.
97. Maldives appreciated the mid-term report submitted by Hungary and encouraged it to take a human rights based approach in dealing with refugees.
98. Mexico acknowledged the efforts made by Hungary to increase the well-being of persons with disabilities and the recent adoption of a strategy to provide alternatives to the institutionalization of persons with mental disabilities.
99. Mongolia underscored the strengthening by Hungary of the Constitutional Court and Ombudsman system, in connection with the new Constitution.
100. Montenegro noted the concerns of CEDAW regarding women belonging to minorities, who were subject of discrimination and ill-treatment by Hungary's law enforcement official.
101. Morocco commended Hungary for the adoption of a new Constitution, which includes new legislative texts, and for acceding OP-CAT.
102. Namibia noted the establishment of the Subcommittee on Women's Dignity with security of women and combating domestic violence as priority tasks.
103. The delegation stated that Hungary had a very diverse media, in the majority of cases privately owned, and there was an independent media authority in place. In 2010 a new Act on Media was adopted and as a result of negotiations and consultations with the Council of Europe and the European Commission the Act on Media was amended in 2012. In 2015 the Act on Media was reviewed by the European Commission and came to the conclusion that some positive steps had been taken since 2011. Regarding the Media Council, its members are elected and appointed by the parliament and their mandate goes over one parliamentary cycle.
104. Sanctions can be applied for example, if minors are harassed on a media organ, or in the case of hate speech, or if the media is unbalanced. The delegation considered the media act in compliance with international standards but it was open to discussions.
105. On the relationship with the NGOs and civil society, the delegation indicated that civil society played a crucial role in public life and also in the justification of public decisions. Civil society had room for criticizing the government. The delegation underscored that the Government evaluated these critical comments and it encouraged dialogue, recalling the Human Rights Working Group where various round table discussions had been carried out. The delegation believed that in the legislative procedure NGOs had the chance to deliver their opinions.

106. The International Criminal Court was of major importance because Hungary was one of the countries supporting ICC and ratifying the Rome Statute.

107. In certain areas addressing segregation represented a larger challenge and fine-tune measures were needed and collaboration with Roma organizations and churches in the process was important.

108. According to the new Fundamental Law Hungary had a new principle on persons with disabilities providing protection for their independent living. The delegation recalled the amendment of the civil code which reinforced the rights of persons with disabilities. The CRPD would be implemented with the best possible effort.

109. On the issue of the LGBT community it was important to put this in the context of hate speech as well, so this act against LGBT was criminalized. The delegation considered Hungary was in the middle rate in the acknowledgement of LGBT rights.

110. The Netherlands noted there was room for improvement on prohibiting domestic violence and marital rape, and encouraged Hungary to undertake further action towards free media laws.

111. Nigeria commended Hungary's efforts for Roma and on extreme poverty and expressed concern about alleged disproportionate use of force against migrants and refugees.

112. Norway acknowledged the efforts to combat hate speech and hate crime.

113. Pakistan commended recent legislations and the cooperation with the Council and Treaty Bodies and expressed hope for appropriate response to the migrant and refugee crisis.

114. Peru expressed its appreciation to Hungary for the measures taken to improve the socio-economic conditions of families.

115. Algeria welcomed the organization since 2008 of a Forum on Human Rights in Budapest and invited Hungary to consider ratifying ICRMW.

116. Poland commended Hungary for upholding its standing invitation to the special procedures mandate holders.

117. Slovenia noted the positive impact of the Budapest Human Rights Forum, welcomed steps for the rights of the Slovenian minority and inquired about the implementation of CEDAW recommendations.

118. The Republic of Korea noted the improved human rights infrastructure and protection of vulnerable groups resulting from the follow-up on the review.

119. The Republic of Moldova commended the creation of the Ombudsman and enhancement of child-friendly administration of justice and expressed concern about the lowered age of criminal responsibility.

120. Romania expressed appreciation for Hungary's measures to protect the rights of persons of national minorities.

121. The Russian Federation welcomed the efforts made by Hungary in implementing the Second Action Plan to improve the conditions of people living in extreme poverty 2015-2017.

122. Senegal welcomed the restructuring of the Constitutional Court and the creation of the Republic Mediator in Hungary.
123. Sierra Leone encouraged Hungary to raise the age of criminal responsibility and urged Hungary to maintain a more humane asylum-seeking process.
124. Portugal welcomed the ratification of OP-CAT and the significant steps for gender equality and commended the establishment of the Inter-Ministerial Human Rights Working Group.
125. South Africa expressed concern about continued discrimination against women of ethnic minorities.
126. Spain recognized the adoption of legislation to tackle more effectively gender violence and welcomed Hungary's involvement in the integration of persons with disabilities in the labour market.
127. The delegation of Hungary welcomed recommendations and contributions, underscoring the importance given to cooperate with the UN and the Human Rights Council. It highlighted Hungary's commitment to promote human rights and expressed its will to apply for membership for the Human Rights Council for 2017-2019. It stated Hungary would take home all of the recommendations and contributions and would get back on what it could support. The delegation stated that human rights mechanisms always had room for improvement and Hungary would try to implement pending obligations.
